Homelessness – Even in the 21st Century, and in a relatively wealthy country like the United Kingdom, homelessness is all too frequent. The latest data (2019) shows that on any given night, there were an average of 4,266 people sleeping rough in the UK. This has risen every year since 2017. Remember this is on any given night, so the number who slept rough over the course of a year is likely to be many times more. A study by the Evening Standard showed that 8,855 people slept rough in London between April 2018 and March 2019. This included 880 under 25s. A number which is on the increase.

Stone Cold - Assessment Week

Today, we are going to write a narrative about a young person who is alone at night and sleeping rough.

Stone Cold - Assessment Week

You need to think about all your knowledge to date that you have on homelessness.

Also, use the experiences of Link etc. from the novel Stone Cold.
