

Example of 1st person narrative:

This morning was a total nightmare. I mean, a total, utter nightmare. After yesterday I didn't think it could get much worse, but I was wrong. So wrong. It all started when I failed to set my alarm for the correct time. When I woke up, I pottered about a bit, not realising that it was actually past eight and school had already started. I'd eaten my toast, had a shower and had switched on the TV - it was only when I saw the time - 9.15! - that I realised what an idiot I had been. I threw on my coat, hair still wet, and ran out of the door. Huffing and puffing like a dog that had been chasing a stick, I arrived at school looking a mess. I signed in - late - and got shouted at by my tutor. I was asked to take out my diary so she could write in my detention when I realised I hadn't even picked up my bag.

TASK:

Imagine that you have been made homeless and have just spent your first night on the streets of Brighton.

DESCRIBE your experiences, using EMOTIVE language.
REMEMBER PARAGRAPHS!

Here are some words/phrases to help you:

SUSPICIOUSLY

I FELT AS IF...

THE WIND WAS...

THE RAIN FELL...

HURRIEDLY

ANGRILY

MY BED WAS LIKE...

I DID NOT UNDERSTAND...